COURSE PURPOSE AND GOALS

In recent years, the People's Republic of China has dramatically increased its presence and influence in Portuguese-speaking countries such as Brazil, Angola, Mozambique, Cape Verde, Guinea-Bissau, São Tomé and Príncipe, East-Timor and Portugal. In response, this new course aims to cover how the different political and juridical systems of these two worlds function and how their business cultures are inter-related. With these objectives fulfilled, students will be furnished with the skills and knowledge required for future success in the area. The themes addressed in the course include Intercultural Management, Commercial Relations, Investment and Tourism, with particular reference to the Chinese initiative "One Belt One Road". The various parts of the course are taught in modules by the very best national and international specialists in the field, which guarantees a range of varied approaches and teaching techniques.

Coimbra offers a unique environment in which to study this course, as its university currently brings together students of the Lusophone world with Chinese students who come to learn Portuguese in order to become diplomats, translators or businessmen. Furthermore, the course actually marks the renewal of a relationship that existed centuries ago. In the middle of the 16th century, the University of Coimbra played a very important role in East-West relations by establishing a link between Europe and China, and for a long time Coimbra was home to the only university in the Lusophone world. Portugal has a history of intensive collaboration and exchange of knowledge with China, which has helped strengthen Sino-Lusophone relations over the years.

TARGET GROUP

By participating in this course, students will gain a greater understanding of the institutional structures and the highly complex and changing trade and business environments in both China and the Portuguese-speaking countries. This knowledge is essential to both current and future diplomats, governors, journalists, lawyers and lawmakers, managers, entrepreneurs and investors, or intermediaries who work in the area of China's relationships with Lusophone and European countries. Businesspeople from Portuguese-speaking countries that compete or collaborate with Chinese companies on a global scale will feel better prepared to understand the political, economic and cultural forces that shape modern-day China. Chinese businesspeople working in Portugal will also be able to better understand the new trends that exist in both the Lusophone and European worlds.

The Course is also open to any students who wish to deepen their understanding of the subject and may be especially attractive to those already enrolled on courses at the University of Coimbra.

The Jesuit Cartography

Jesuit cartographers traveled throughout the Chinese Empire in the early 18th century and conducted astronomical observations to determine the latitude and longitude of various locations in relation to Beijing. Their observations are reflected in this work, which includes general and partial maps of China, Chinese Tartary and Tibed (1734). © UC • Photo: EGUC

Fragments of Tiles

The Jesuit College of Coimbra was one of the main institutions that taught missionaries before they travelled to China. In the 17th and 18th centuries, the Jesuits ordered tiles to assist their students in learning Mathematics, Physics and Astronomy. Their knowledge proved to be very useful to the missionaries who were seeking acceptance by the Chinese emperor.
